

Ships Named in Honor of United States Marines and Members of Other Services Serving with the Marines

This list builds on a compilation of work done by USCS members

Paul Nitchman and Alvin Eckert

dated 15 October 2000.

This version was compiled in February 2007 by:

Glenn L. Smith

Lieutenant Commander, United States Navy (Retired)

Main resources used included:

- Dictionary of Naval Fighting Ships,
- Naval Vessels Register,
- Catalog of United States Naval Postmarks, published by the Universal Cancellation Society, Fifth Edition, 1997, with Addenda and Corrigenda, November 2001,
- Edson's Raiders; The 1st Marine Raider Battalion in World War II, Joseph H. Alexander, Naval Institute Press, Annapolis, 2001,
- Wikipedia, the online encyclopedia,
- and other on-line resources.

The purpose of this list is to honor and commemorate the extraordinary service to the nation of the United States Marine Corps. Permission is granted by the compiler to use this list in any way, including publication, which further honors The Corps.

Expression of Appreciation: Sincere appreciation is owed to Alvin Eckert for generously sharing his work, in collaboration with Paul Nitchman, dated 15 October 2000 (commonly known as USCS Data Sheet #22). That extensive work was critical in validating and correcting this work. Excellent advice and corrections were also received from Bob Rawlings and Wayne Hassell, for which gratitude is expressed.

Responsibility: Every effort was made to ensure the accuracy of this list. Where discrepancies were found, the citation was cross referenced and resolved to the satisfaction of the compiler. While the above named individual's help improved this work considerably, all errors or omissions in this list are the sole responsibility of the compiler.

Additions and Corrections: This is intended to be a dynamic document, and all future additions and/or corrections should be sent to the compiler at the above address.

Explanatory notes:

1. Ship's names: In this list, ship's names and hull numbers are in bold print, except where they appear as part of the citation text, and in that case the ship's name is in italics. They are listed in alphabetical order. Ships whose name includes the namesake's first name are listed using the first name for alphabetical reference. For example: USS George Washington would be listed under the letter "G," not the letter "W."
2. Individual's names: Where the individual being honored with a ship's name has their complete name included in the ship's name, it is not repeated in the citation below the ship's name. If only the last name of the individual is used in the ship's name, the individual's full name is given in the citation.
3. Ship's hull numbers: Ships normally have hull numbers that describe their function and sequential order of being built. In the list, for example, USS Agerholm DD-826 is the 826th destroyer built. Some ships have had more than one hull number, having been converted from one function to another. In those cases, all known hull numbers are listed. Likewise, some ship's names are used more than once, and in those cases, all known hull numbers are noted.
4. Ranks: The ranks listed in the citation are the highest rank held by the individual, unless otherwise noted. The rank abbreviations are the standard used by the individual's service at the time of his service. The classic example is that of Navy corpsmen. Through the World Wars, they were called Pharmacist's Mates, since then they have been called Hospital Corpsmen. Also Navy and Coast Guard rank abbreviations have changed over time, for example, in WW2 and before a Signalman First Class would cited as SM 1/c. Modern usage cites it as SM1.
5. Other services personnel: Ships named for members of the Navy and Coast Guard are included in this list when the naming of a ship resulted from a heroic act performed while the individual was serving with or in direct support of the Marines. As part of the Navy Department, the United States Marine Corps does not maintain its own medical department or religious component. Medical and religious support to the Marines has always been provided by the Navy. Corpsmen, physicians, a dentist, and chaplains have all been cited for heroism in the field with Marines, and have had ships named for them. One Coast Guardsman has also earned that honor (see below). When serving in the field with the Marines, these other service personnel normally wear Marine uniforms, and they become totally integrated into the Marine organizational structure. Marines traditionally show great respect and affection for their corpsmen, doctors, and chaplains. It is therefore deemed appropriate by the compiler of this list to include ships named for these brave men.
6. Coast Guard: Some might ask how a Coast Guardsman ended up on this list. By law, in time of war, vessels of the United States Coast Guard may operate under the command of the United States Navy. This has happened in almost every war fought by the United States, and continues today when Coast Guard cutters regularly deploy as part of Naval Task Forces in the War on Terrorism. In WW2, Coast Guardsmen manned many of the landing craft, attack transports, and even some convoy escort ships. Signalman First Class Douglas Munro was one of those men, and he interposed his landing craft between the enemy and a group of Marines being extracted from a beach on Guadalcanal, giving his life to protect "his Marines." This compiler is confident that the Marines would want his action appropriately recognized and included here.

7. Women: There are no women's names on this list. While women have served faithfully and well in the Marines and in support of Marines since the early days of the 20th century, to date none have distinguished themselves in combat to the extent that their acts warranted the naming of a ship in their honor or memory. Having said that, it is almost a certainty that someday, in the not too distant future, a Marine (who happens to be a woman) will so distinguish herself in combat that she will earn a Medal of Honor or other high award and be recognized with the naming of a ship in her name. Likewise, a Navy Corpsman or chaplain (who happens to be a woman) will surely someday use her body to shield a wounded Marine, and in doing so give her life.

8. List of common abbreviations used in this list:

- USMC - United States Marine Corps
- USN - United States Navy
- USCG - United States Coast Guard

(The letter "R" after the above abbreviations denotes the reserve component of that service.)

- KIA – Killed in action
- DOW - Died of wounds
- MOH - The Medal of Honor is the highest award for valor in action against an enemy force which can be bestowed upon an individual serving in the Armed Services of the United States. Generally presented to its recipient by the President of the United States in the name of Congress, it is often called the Congressional Medal of Honor.
- DSC – The second highest award for valor of the United States Army. Its equivalents are the Navy Cross and the Air Force Cross. Marines and members of other services are eligible to receive awards from services other than their own. This most often occurs when that service person is operating under the command of another service.
- WW1 & WW2: World Wars 1 & 2
- RVN – Republic of Vietnam
