DATA SHEET #31 - APRIL 2008

OPERATION MAGIC CARPET

By Stewart B. Milstein L-7205

Operation Magic Carpet was the name given to the seafight of US military and civilian personnel from Europe, the Pacific, Asia, Alaska, the Caribbean and South America to the US. The operation began on September 6, 1945 and ended on September 1, 1946.

Magic Carpet did not become effective in the movement of US personnel from Europe until after Japan surrendered. By December 1945, all combat ships ceased operating as transports between the US and Europe. Starting in January, 1946, non-combat naval vessels were supposed to be shifted from the Atlantic to the Pacific Theater. Pacific Theater combat ships were supposed to stop operating as transports as of February 1946.

The cease fire went into effect in the Pacific Theater on August 15, 1945. The initial naval response after the cease fire was to locate, via aerial reconnaissance flown from the aircraft carriers sailing the waters off the Japanese coast, the POW camps in Japan and on the Asian mainland. Once the camps had been located, planes began airdrops of food, medicine, and other supplies.

In the Pacific Theater, the formal surrender documents were signed aboard the USS MISSOURI (BB-63) on September 2, 1945. Then Task Force 11 began the initial MAGIC CARPET run on September 11, 1945. The battleships WASHINGTON, IDAHO, MISSISSIPPI, NEW MEXICO, and NORTH CAROLINA, accompanied by the cruiser PORTLAND and at least four destroyers picked up 900 passengers (mainly higher ranking naval personnel) and sailed southeast to Okinawa and then on to Pearl Harbor. The ships transited the Panama Canal and dispersed to various East Coast ports.

Planning for the return of US personnel had begun in 1943, and more serious planning took place in 1944. When the war in Europe ended in May 1945, the US Army was experienced in moving large numbers of troops. Bases had been established from which ships were to take troops either to the east coast of the US or through the Panama Canal to the Pacific Theater. The suddenness by which the war in the Pacific came to an end three months later caught the military off guard. There was just not enough lift capacity to bring home all the troops from around the world as fast as they wanted to come home or as fast as the US public demanded. To help meet this need for capacity, CNO, FAdm. King, designated combat ships as transports (Isenberg). Many CVs, CVLs, and CVEs as well as cruisers made multiple trips across the oceans to bring the boys home. Even with this increased capacity the Navy carried only 55% of the troops home (Isenberg). The rest of the forces were carried by civilian and US Army Transportation Services, because the Navy also had to send many of its ships into the yards so that they could receive necessary overhaul, repair, and transformation so that they could carry extra personnel. The Navy's efforts were further handicapped by the fact that many sailors had the acquired the necessary points to be discharged. These sailors could not be forced to stay in the service to provide the crews in this worldwide ferrying service. Some naval vessels were sent to the US for the specific purpose of being either laid up or scrapped. These ships made only one voyage as part of Operation Magic Carpet.

On September 9, 1945, RAdm. H.S. Kendall was designated as the Commander Task Group 16.12. RAdm. Kendall would command MAGIC CARPET through its peak operating period of December 1945, when 305 ships, including 222 troopships, 12 hospital ships, 6 battleships, 18 cruisers, and 57 aircraft carriers (of which 46 were escort carriers), on all the oceans of the world, were moving US personnel toward the US. So many servicemen were being separated that Gen. George C. Marshall told RAdm. Morison, "...that demobilization had become a rout."

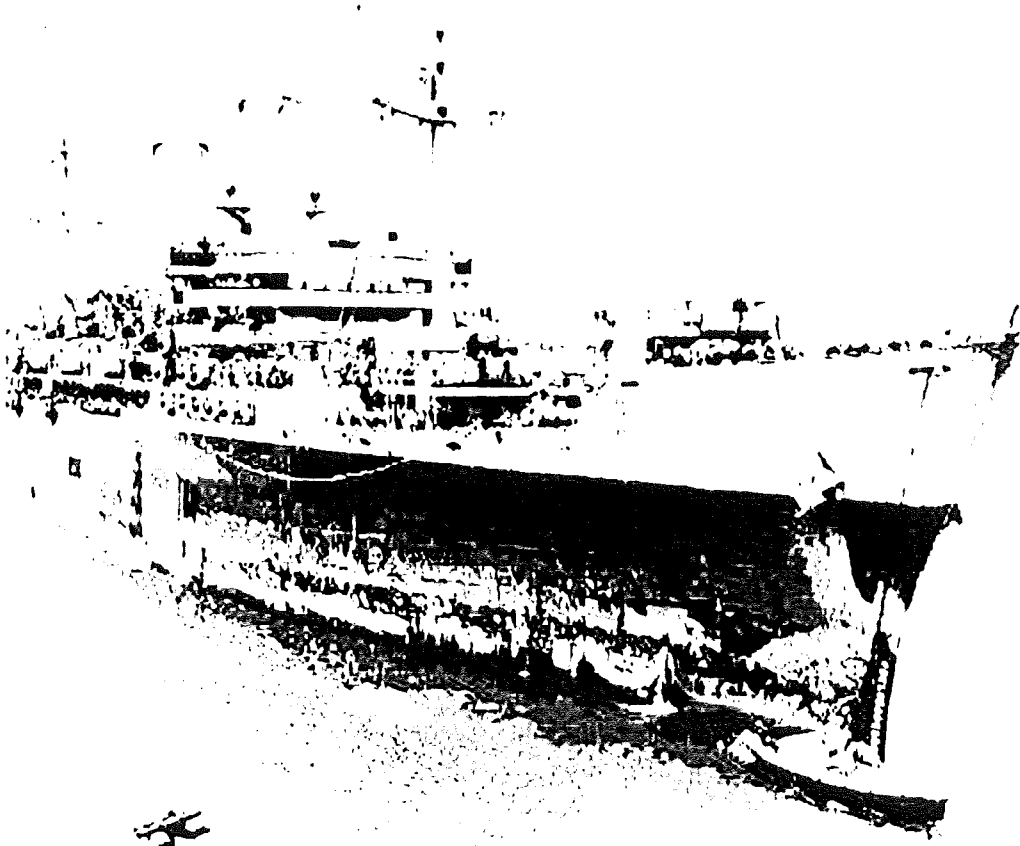

On September 11, 1945, RAdm. F.G. Fahrion arrived at Nagasaki to recover US POWs and, RAdm. Riggs arrived in Wakayama accompanied by two hospital ships and three destroyers to transport more former POWs to Okinawa. By September 18, 1945, all known Allied ex-POWs in the 8th Army area had been recovered. CVEs CHENANGO and CAPE GLOUCESTER, accompanied by the cruisers BILOXI and MOBILE and several DDs, removed all Allied ex-POWS to Okinawa by September 22, 1945.

The movement of personnel was bi-directional. Former Axis prisoners had to be repatriated to Japan and Europe. The USS WASP carried 1200 former Italian POWs to Naples and in 27 hours loaded 4000 US soldiers for return to the US. Occupation forces had to be sent to Germany, China, Korea, and Japan. Chinese troops were ferried from southern to northern China to disarm the Japanese and maintain combat forces against Mao's communist forces. Adm. Morison stated that the LSTs were to be used to repatriate Japanese forces back to Japan and were not supposed to be used to transport US servicemen. In fact, two LSTs were used to transport US forces demonstrating the need for lift capacity.

The movement of personnel often took place in stages. In the Pacific Theater, not every ship made a round trip between a foreign port and the US. Passengers were transported from various locations to collecting centers, and then transported to the US. Thirty percent of the personnel left from the Philippines, thirty percent from the Marianas, and thirty percent from Okinawa and Japan. The remaining ten percent embarked from Hawaii, Korea, China and the Southwest Pacific. Hawaii was used as a transfer point. Personnel bound for the East Coast were separated from those headed for the West Coast. They were then assigned transport based on the transporting vessel's final destination.

The Secretary of the Navy's report stated that 354 ships transported 2+ million people between October 1, 1945 and May 1, 1946. This accounting lists the official numbers and vessels. It does not take into account the large number of ships that were not officially a part of Magic Carpet. It seemed as if no US- bound ship left a foreign port without taking point qualified people on board. Ships in transit to the US that were to be taken out of service put into Okinawa, the Philippines, the Marshall Islands, the Solomon Islands, and Pearl Harbor where returning personnel were taken on board for transport back to the US.

Authors research notes

USCS member Capt. Herb Rommel, CO of the destroyer USS WILKES, transported 80 men from Pearl Harbor to San Diego. After they were disembarked, his ship picked up another 40 passengers in Coco Solo, US Panama Canal Zone and transported them to Charleston SC. Capt. Rommel was kind enough to share with me a copy of the Rules and Regulations for life aboard his ship. (A copy of those Rules and Regs is included with the Data Sheet.) I do not know how many other COs exercised the same authority and initiative as they sailed home.

The passage back to the United States was not easy. The trip was long, with limited recreational facilities. Many ships carried more than twice their usual wartime complement. Less experienced crewmen were pressed into roles long before the Navy would have considered them ready for assignment. There was a need for cooks, bakers and stewards to replace the many that had already been discharged. The USS INGERSOLL had a problem with dysentery as it returned from Korea. The USS PORTLAND was hit by a huge wave that killed two people as she transited the Atlantic Ocean. These are the conditions that the personnel were willing to endure knowing that they were going home to be discharged. Operation Magic Carpet was all about getting people home as quickly as possible.

I had several reasons for taking on this research project. I have always been impressed by two scenes from "Victory at Sea." One showed the warships, completely covered with soldiers and sailors, passing under the Golden Gate Bridge. The second scene was of warships, laden with personnel, passing the Statue of Liberty. There is also an oft-told family story about my cousin who served aboard an aircraft carrier in the Pacific. It is said that when he landed at the Brooklyn Navy Yard he hugged his wife so tightly that he broke 4 of her ribs. It was he who introduced me to collecting naval covers. The concept of returning military personnel from World War II was a natural course for me to follow.

I started with a list of Magic Carpet ships compiled by Steve Shay using Google. Google cited the official Navy sources as well as personal remembrances of crewman from various ships that were officially, and unofficially a part of Magic Carpet.

I wrote to various veterans associations. The Tin Can Sailors Association was kind enough to run a short piece I had written requesting information about Magic Carpet. The response generated by this short article was most useful. The Tin Can sailors supplied me with copies of privately printed memoirs, newspaper articles, as well as suggestions as to where other information might be found.

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) initially informed me that they had the War Diary of Carrier Division 24 (CARDIV 24) from September 1945 through June 1946. When the documents arrived from NARA there was a note informing me that they were unable to find the documents after December 1945.

In response to my written request, I received from The Naval Historical Center copies Press Releases that listed the names of the ships that were ordered into Magic Carpet duty, and the numbers of personnel that were to be transported. Regrettably, there is a difference between orders and the action. Some vessels suffered mechanical failure while other ships were diverted to different ports as a result of changing circumstances. The press releases often did not take these changes into consideration.

I used the on-line version of DANFS (Dictionary of American Fighting Ships). At this site there were dates of deployment during Magic Carpet and some of the ports from which the ship sailed and arrived. It should be noted that this is a condensed history of the ship's operations.

The on-line version of DANFS was helpful in determining which ships were involved in Operation Magic Carpet. However, the DANFS histories were originally written from documents that were prepared in haste. DANFS seems to be replete with errors in dates, locations, and spellings. The information therein was incomplete and fragmentary because there were not enough yeomen to accurately record and transcribe the necessary documents. There was such a rush to bring people home that keeping accurate records was not a major priority, so some precise history has been compromised. When there was a conflict between DANFS and CARDIV 24, I tended to use the CARDIV material as they were original sources. DANFS entries, in the revised Volume A-B, seemed to be more accurate.

I have expanded the list of ships to include those were involved in the return of personnel from the Caribbean, Panama, and Alaska. I have also included data on those ships that were assigned to repatriate US and Allied ex-POWs as well as the sick and the wounded.

There were many different types of ships involved in Operation Magic Carpet. I have counted 642 ships the majority of which, 408, were auxiliaries, mainly APs, APAs, and AKAs. In the case of USS TRANQUILITY, her hull designation was temporarily changed from AH (hospital ship) to APH (evacuation transport). There were 236 combat ships: 99 were destroyer-types, 76 aircraft carriers, principally CVEs (57), sixteen battleships, and 36 cruisers.

There are two USCS members who most be cited for their contributions in making this tabulation possible:

Steve Shay (USCS 10821) took the time to search the internet for the 300+ Magic Carpet ships that began my research on this topic.

Lawrence B. Brennan (USCS# L6221) is a Captain in the JAG Corps US Navy. During one of his two week Reserve Duty assignments in Washington DC he was able to locate and send me documents that allowed the research to continue. He suggested people to contact and sources of information. As I dug deeper and deeper into the records I sometimes wished he was not such a knowledgeable source of information.

This record is incomplete. I do not plan to examine the 642 ships' logs that would yield a more accurate rendering of the topic. I look at this document as a starting point and look forward to the corrections that I hope will be forwarded to me. All mistakes in this document are my responsibility.

MEMORANDUM TO THE PASSENGERS TRAVELING ON THE WILKES:

Greetings and we hope that you have a happy trip. These instructions are designed to smooth off the rough edges and give you the word.

You will be assigned to a department "for duty." We do not now plan to detail you to any watches, but expect you to help us keep the ship clean.

You will muster for fire collision, abandon ship, general quarters as follows: Those with last names A-L at 5" gun #2, those with last names M-Z at 5" gun #3. Fall in by alphabetical order. If we fire a practice the men who muster aft will retire to the starboard side of the main deck.

Water hours: There are none at present. The washroom is closed during working hours for cleaning. If you waste water, there will be water hours and you will not be popular.

Gambling - it is not permitted and will not be tolerated (Believe me now, and don't ruin your chances for a speedy separation).

Laundry - is free and will be handled through the department master at arms.

Barbering - is free, but must be arranged in advance.

Meals - oncoming watch section has priority in chow line.

Movies - Each movie will be shown on 2 successive nights. Do not throw lighted cigarette butts over the side. Put them out on the sole of your shoe.

Classes - You are invited to attend our classes in English, Mathematics, etc. The plan of the day will contain information on this.

Liberty - We expect to stop at Pearl Harbor, San Diego, Canal Zone and east Coast. Maximum liberty will be granted. Passengers will participate in equal basis with ship's company.
